Right of Interment (ROI) permits for standard full-size plots are issued on the condition that they require a minimum of one traditional bodily interment and can not be used exclusively for cremated remains (ashes).

When selecting a plaque, we recommend a design that allows for future additions—such as 'screw-on' plates—to ensure all family members can be commemorated together. Please note that the total plaque area, whether single or combined, must remain within the specified size limits

An initial plaque, changes to existing plaques, or additional plaques can only be installed after approval of an Application by the Holder of the Right of Interment or their Stonemason. No works may commence prior to approval and payment of the relevant fees. Current fees are available from the Trust Administrator or our website.

Please contact the Trust Administrator to arrange to meet a Trust Member, who will guide you through the process of selecting a Grave or Memorial Garden site. All Monumental works must be approved by the Trust, prior to commencement, to ensure compliance with relevant legislation and Australian Standards.
